However, many other leading ladies have stood up to be counted in 2017 and 2018 and the top six on the current rankings are all in Hungary today taking part in the qualifying for Saturday's final.

A wide array of athletes will be going for gold such as the world champion and world No.1, Gulnaz Gubaydullina of Russia, world No.2 Anastasiya Prokopenko from Belarus and the Hungary trio Tamara Alekszejev, Sarolta Kovacs and Zsafia Foldhazi.

her first appearance of the season and world No.6 Annika Schleu will aim to make sure Germany continues to make regular appearances on the podium after the recent retirement of the 2008 Olympic champion, Lena Schöneborn.

In the Men's Individual event (qualifying tomorrow; Final on Sunday), there is also a celestial gathering with the 2016 Olympic champion, Alexander Lesun (RUS), taking on most of the form athletes in the sport with all but one of the world's top 10 taking part.

Korea are sure to have a say in how the podium places are settled with world champion Jung Jinhwa and high-class team-mates Jun Woongtae and Lee Jihun all involved, Pavlo Tymoshchenko of Ukraine in the mix as always and the challenge of France led by world No.5 Valentin Prades.
